COLLEGE WILL MARK FOUNDER'S DAY APRIL 7TH

Dr. Lester K. Ade, State Superintendent Of Education, to Speak.

SUB-FRESHMAN DAY ON MAY 2ND

Announcement is made in the current issue of the Gettysburg college bulletin of plans for two outstanding events in the spring program at the college—founder's day, April 7, and sub-freshman day, May 2.

Dr. Lester K. Ade, state superintendent of public instruction, will be the founder's day speaker. He will deliver an address in Brua chapel at 11 o'clock in the morning that will be the feature of the celebration which commemorates the one hundred and fourth anniversary of the granting of the college charter.

At the same time the second annual honors day observance will be held when special recognition will be given students who have attained a place on the dean's honor roll, membership in Phi Beta Kappa or in the Gettysburg honor society.

Sub-freshman Day

Sub-freshman day, an innovation in the college program, will be devoted to the entertainment of young men and women who may be regarded as prospective college students. It is to provide a recreational and educational opportunity for young people who plan college careers.

An extensive committee, composed of students and faculty members, is at work with preparations for the day. Sub-committees are arranging the program, reception, exhibits, luncheon and publicity. Present plans provide for a program that includes registration, visits to exhibits and demonstrations of a departmental and general nature. Plans for their participation are not complete in several departments of the college but the library has announced an exhibit, sponsored by the modern book club of the college, which will show work of Gettysburg college alumni in world work.

Athletic Program

At noon on sub-freshman day a luncheon will be served in the college gymnasium. The afternoon will be given over to athletic events and to a tea and reception for girls at the women's dormitory. College athletes will meet a Dickinson aggregation in a track meet during the afternoon to be followed by a baseball game with Susquehanna university. The official program concludes with the baseball game but an Owl and Nightingale play is listed for the evening for those who are able to remain.

College alumni have been asked to cooperate in the plans for the day by furnishing names of students in secondary schools to whom invitations should be sent. Motor cavalcades are being arranged to bring the young people to Gettysburg for the day.

Discussion in the second part of the address centered about the group of books that show the struggle for the recognition of human importance. He listed "Inheritance," by Phillips Bentzley and "The Stars Look Down," by H. H. Croman in this group.

The third group of novels was that in which a new appraisal of war is given by looking at war from a new perspective. "All Quiet on the Western Front" and "Testament of Youth" were listed as examples of the type.

Expect Capacity Crowd At Closing Session of Cooking School Tonight

Attendance records at The Gettysburg Times cooking school indicate that a new record will be established this evening when the final session will be held in the Hotel Gettysburg annex.

Last year a total of 2,724 persons attended the demonstrations. In the three sessions held this week 2,057 persons have been present. At the final session last year 1,103 persons were in attendance and this evening an even greater attendance is anticipated.

Figures taken daily at the school this week reveal that 586 persons attended on Tuesday, 789 on Wednesday and 682 Thursday afternoon. Each represents a substantial gain over the corresponding day of the 1935 school.

Despite arrangements for more than 1,200 persons, officials in charge are urging an early attendance, as it will be a case of "first come, first served."

The hotel auditorium has been attractively decorated and has received many compliments on its fine appearance. A spring background was used in the design.

Mrs. Bertha M. Harris, who is conducting the school, has a special list of dishes to be prepared in the concluding session. As usual, the dishes will be distributed to persons in attendance.

Featuring a list of more than twenty-five prizes to be awarded this evening is the new gas range donated by the Gettysburg gas corporation. Many other valuable prizes will be awarded.

Attendance is necessary for the holder of a winning ticket to become eligible for a prize. No awards will be made to persons whose names are called and who are not present.

Miss Myrtle Shriver, winner of one of the food baskets Thursday afternoon, donated the basket to the Red Cross.

Nearly a truckload of supplies is already on hand at the engine house, it was stated.

Cash contributions received by the local chapter of the Red Cross amounted to $4,238.14 this afternoon. A letter from national headquarters received here today stated that approximately 450,000 people are depending on the Red Cross for food, clothing and shelter. The figure is expected to mount to 500,000. It was stated. Cash contributions will continue to be received here for an indefinite period.

Dr. J. McCrea Dickson, president of the Commerce body, today said, "I feel hopeful that we can raise the $1,000. HOFFMAN READY TO SAVE BRUNO

New Jersey Governor Declares Hauptmann Trial Reeks with Unfairness.

Trenton, March 27 (AP).—Governor Harold G. Hoffman charged today that "the whole (Hauptmann) case reeks with unfairness, passion and prejudice," and asserted that if the prosecution would tell him he had the right he would "be glad" to grant a further reprieve.

In a statement that bristled with derision of Prosecutor Anthony Hauck, Jr., of Hunterdon county, Hoffman said he did not believe he had the right to grant another reprieve; but that "if the brilliant Mr. Hauck and his legal advisers will advise me that I do have that right, I shall be glad to exercise it."

"I am more firmly convinced than ever that Hauptmann was not given a trial in line with what we consider to be American standards of justice."

The Governor said he would "sincerely welcome" a legislative investigation.

Colonel Mark O. Kimberling, principal keeper at state prison, said he told Hauptmann "things don't look very favorable," but Hauptmann replied cheerfully he was sure he would escape the chair.

"I don't feel that I will go out that door," Kimberling said Hauptmann told him pointing to the door to the death chamber. "I feel something is going to happen."

There was one report today that Hauptmann had given the Governor a signed statement that he "bought" the Lindbergh ransom money from his furrier partner, Isador Fisch.

TRACE DUES OF TOWNSENDITES

State Managers Get "Cut" on New Members, Renewals and Quotas.

Washington, March 27 (AP).—A charges that one state manager of the Townsend Old Age Pension organization received $1,800 to $2,100 monthly in commissions was placed Thursday before a special House investigating committee.

Near the end of a long first-day interrogation of Robert E. Clements, recently resigned national secretary, the committee's counsel, James Sullivan, said Edward James Margett had been receiving such commissions in California.

Clements, whose failure to bring requested records to the crowded hearing room caused a half hour's recess, said he was unable to confirm the figures without reference to his files. But he reminded that the state managers had to split with congressional district organizers and pay office and other expenses.

The witness, who paid tribute to Dr. F. E. Townsend as well as absolving committee investigators of charges of using "back-alley" methods, said the state managers receive 40 per cent of all dues collected from new members of Townsend clubs.

Clements said the state managers also receive 20 per cent of all "quotas," or sums which the clubs turn in to national headquarters. He conceded that national headquarters had no knowledge of expenses of the state officers, but agreed to furnish a complete list of the managers, their salaries and commissioners.

Most of the day was spent in tedious questioning of Clements' personal history.

Sullivan stressed Clements' admitted lack of formal education along economic lines.

Clements denied Sullivan's assertion national officers did not know what was going on in various regional and area headquarters.

He conceded, however, the investigation of state and regional managers in many instances had been sketchy, except such as was necessary when they posted the required bond for their positions.

California, the witness said, has six area managers who receive ten cents on each new member, ten cents on each renewal and 40 per cent of the club "quotas," or payments fixed by national headquarters. Regional managers, he said, receive $50 a week salary.

Is Elected to Shamokin Church

The Rev. Richard B. Martin has been elected pastor of Trinity Lutheran church at Shamokin which has a confirmed membership of 1,100 persons. He is the son of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. D. S. Martin. His father is minister at Grace Lutheran church in York.

Rev. Mr. Martin has been supplying the Shamokin church since the pastor, the Rev. Dr. W. E. Fischer, became ill last Christmas. The Rev. Dr. Fischer is now 87 years of age and after serving the congregation for many years, resigned. He has been made pastor emeritus. The Rev. Mr. Martin will be installed some time after Easter. This will be his first charge since completing his ministerial studies.

The Rev. Mr. Martin received his A. B. degree at Gettysburg college in 1931 and his B. D. at the Gettysburg theological seminary in 1934. During 1934 and 1935 he and Mrs. Martin were in Edinburgh, Scotland, where the Rev. Mr. Martin furthered his studies. This spring the young minister will receive his master of sacred theology degree from Gettysburg seminary.

The Rev. Mr. Martin and his wife are now residing in Shamokin.

SYNOPSIS: Iris Lanning is at the theater after a gorgeous dinner in her Aunt Phina's apartment. Aunt Phina is America's most famous courtesier. Iris brother Owen designs for her. And Iris is the girl from Persia, Pa., brought up in aristocratic poverty, who only three days ago did not know whether her brother was alive or dead. Phina and Owen have separated Iris from home, kindly Uncle Will, and her Aunt Ella. Iris has met, by chance, some young things she had avoided with difficulty that afternoon on the train.

Chapter 19

SPEEDY LIFE

"Having a crowd in tomorrow p. m." said the girl. Cocktails. Georgia Blair, in the book. You've got to come. Promise? Goodbye."

Iris supposed she had asked only Owen, but Dicky said swiftly: "Leave it to me, lady, I'll pick 'em up and bring 'em in. Gimme the house address, Sigrid."

Sigrid wrote swiftly on a card she gave him. Not so used to crowds as the others, Iris found herself caught far behind the other two in the hurry back to the seats. As before, it was Allan who saw, who left his group, caught her arm, said pleasantly, "I see your seats; I'll get you there."

"You always help me out of trouble!" she said gratefully. "I suppose you could see—I wasn't a New Yorker—"

He smiled down at her. "I could see that you have something most girls haven't; the delightful gift of making a man feel you need taking care of. I'll see you at Georgia's tomorrow, then. Here's your seat."

She did not know whether he had heard her hurried, "Oh, I don't know, I don't think so!" before he turned back to the others.

She nearly forgot the whole episode as, eyes wide, hands tightly clasped, she saw the second half of the revue. But when they came out Allan and Dick were waiting in the lobby; and it was to Phina that Allan spoke easily and graciously, not to Iris.

"My names Allan Beckley. I think you know my mother, Mrs. Willson Beckley. This is Madame Phina Weatherly, I know."

Aunt Phina's even teeth gleamed. "Otherwise Phina. Yes, indeed, your mother's figure is my pride! And thank you for protecting my little girl here. It's actually her first revue."

Iris wished that hadn't had to come out—he would think she was unsophisticated! But he said with no lessening of interest: "Dick Hamilton here wants to pick up your young people for Georgia Blair's cocktail party tomorrow. I wanted to make sure they were coming."

"Better come," said Dick cheerfully. "When Allan gets his eye on you you're Davy Crockett's coon. He may even keep Georgia from eating you. I don't know how he handles you gals!"

Phina more or less ignored Dicky. "My girls say they're coming," she said sweetly to Allan.

"Thanks a lot," he said, also ignoring Dicky.

As softly and easily as he had come, he was gone. Dicky remained a moment.

"Don't fall for him. Not safe! Fall for me!" he stage-whispered, and shouldered his way after Allan.

"But, Phina, honestly, she didn't ask Sigrid and me!" Iris gasped as they settled themselves in the taxi.

Even Owen laughed. "Gosie, this isn't the Assembly Set in the seventies," he said.

"Allan Beckley took pains to make it all right," Phina explained. "Anybody can drift in on a party like that. They're charming young people, as I thought on the train."

Iris supposed they knew best. She sat still and stared at the colored advertisements that flapped over and over in a holder. There were nine before you got back to the first one, two kissing people who advertised chewing-gum. They looked very magnificent to be addicted to gum. . . . It was all very different, but Phina must know.

She saw herself as she passed the long frameless mirror in the downstairs foyer. She would not have known Uncle Will's Iris in all this black velvet, with rose chiffon tossing around her satin slippers feet, except for the live excited gray eyes shining below the polished waves of dusky hair.

As she stared Owen's kind gray eyes, black-lashed like her own, met hers a little wistfully in the glass. She nestled closer to him on the other side, with a thrill of kinship and comfort. Her very own brother! She knew, at that moment, that she was on his side in the warfare over Sigrid. She'd help him as much as she possibly could.

When she awoke next morning she was lost at first. Where was the big engraving of Delacroix's "Christian Martyr" which had always faced her big brass bed against its background of stained faded blue-and-brown wallpaper?

Instead she was staring at a group of gay rat-faced French gentlemen in woolly colors having an eighteenth century fete galante inside a gilt frame. Her arms lay on a deep fold on monogrammed linen, over a soft rose blanket.

She had scarcely oriented herself when Honora came in carrying a gay painted tray with legs, which she set above her, saying: "Good morning, Miss Iris, I hope you slept well. Miss Ross is coming in to chat while you breakfast—it's the early bird she is. Will you have sugar on your grapefruit?"

"Heaps, please."

"My child," said Phina, taut and erect in tailored black, from the ivory doorway, "do you mean that you have never had to diet?"

"Oh, good morning, Aunt Phina!" Life tightened and speeded itself when Miss Ross appeared, Iris, who had been lazing comfortably, sat higher on her pillows, and Honora put a rose silk jacket about her. "No, never. I suppose running up and down stairs kept me thin."

"I've come in to discuss plans with you before I go over to the salon."

Phina sat down in the rose and ivory chair, unsoftened by its easiness, but she spoke easily.

"I want my little girl to have the happiest time possible. So I want you to tell me frankly what lessons you need—what accomplishments you have. Sometimes a lack of equipment makes all the difference to one's happiness. To begin with, I'm sending you to a riding school directly; and you'd better learn to drive a car unless you know how."

"Aunt Phina, you're doing such a lot! I'd love to learn to ride. I can drive, now."

"Oh, yes, all you young things pick up. What about dancing?"

"Whell, what you'd learn from the others."

Claims Low Speed Laws Dangerous

Chicago (AP).—More than 94 per cent of Chicago's motorists are breaking the city's speed laws, says the Chicago Motor club—and adds that it's the fault of the laws.

The club bases its statement that only six out of every 100 drivers keep within the posted speed regulations on the basis of a recent traffic survey.

"The posted speed limits are out of step with motoring conditions," says Z. A. Faulkner, club engineer. "The excessively low posted limits have not curbed recklessness and have not reduced the average travel pace."

On the city's south side outer drive Faulkner asserts a limit of 40 miles an hour is too slow. Of all the cars clocked he says only 25 were keeping within that limit and that most of them were a menace to other traffic.

"Those drivers," says Faulkner, "were constantly exposed to a bump in the rear."

Consult Your Doctor

This is a thrilling age, full of speed, danger, complexity. The average person nowadays knows more, sees more, feels more in a day than his grandfather did in a decade.

This rapid age also makes its demands upon the human system. The shock and alarms of modern life are exhausting—they break down physical reserves until life becomes a burden. Yet a really healthy person enjoys modern life.

Physicians understand the need for physical fitness. Consult your doctor at the first sign of apathy or mental unrest. He can improve your health and keep you zestful.

His first aid is a reliable drugist who understands the art of accurately filling his prescriptions without substitution and at fair prices.

Greenberg Signs Tiger Contract

Lakeland, Fla., March 27 (AP).—

Hank Greenberg, last of the outstanding holdouts, signed a contract to play first base for the world champion Detroit Tigers after a long conference with club officials Thursday night.

Terms of the contract were not announced but all parties said they were "happy." Greenberg arrived here Thursday.

Soon after the Tigers returned from Bradenton, where they played an exhibition game, the husky first baseman went into a conference with Manager Mickey Cochrane, Owner Walter O. Briggs and Walter O. Briggs, Jr., assistant secretary-treasurer.

The conference lasted two hours and forty-five minutes.

Both Greenberg and the Tiger management have been tight-lipped and there was no basis for an estimate of the salary the husky slugger will receive. His 1935 salary was reported to be $12,000.

"FORGOTTEN PRISONER"

WINS POINT ON APPEAL

Chicago, March 27 (AP).—The appellate court Thursday remanded to the Circuit Court the case of Raymond E. Prochnow, 39, "forgotten prisoner," held in the county jail since 1934 for contempt of court.

The high court reversed the recent decision of the Circuit Court which had ruled it had no jurisdiction to re-open the case on the ground the charge against Prochnow could not be nullified because the judge who passed sentence has retired.

Prochnow was sentenced after failure to pay $35,000 to the estate of Attorney William Garnett for securities entrusted to his care by the

SHRINES

IT SEEMS to me that the spot where a great man or woman was born should forever remain as a shrine. I have always been thrilled with such scenes. The tiny Poe cottage in New York city has inspired untold numbers. The Lincoln log cabin, the home of Washington at Mount Vernon—and others that have been made permanent shrines, are great lessons to the youth of any land.Walt Whitman was born in a small house on Long Island, New York.
Later he moved to Camden, New Jersey, where he died. The latter home has been made a Whitman shrine and is open to all.Walt Whitman was born on May 31st, 1819. His own father built the house in 1810. The old well and drooping lilac bushes that "The Good Gray Poet" wrote about are still there. But now the house is for sale!
Who will buy it? Who will see that it shall forever remain as a shrine to America's truest native poet?Whitman became a nurse in a government hospital during the Civil War and there contracted a malady from which he never recovered.
Later he became paralyzed and died in the Camden home.In his Long Island home was written "Leaves of Grass" which has become one of the most famous and living poems in the English language.
Unlike any other book ever written, it became a life development, growing up as did the poet—in stature and greatness.George Bernard Shaw once stated that England did not deserve great men, referring to the neglect of such a man as Samuel Butler. I wonder if America deserves its great men when a few thousand dollars could purchase the Walt Whitman birthplace and make it into a shrine that would be an inspiration to thousands upon thousands as the years come and go.The first edition of Whitman's "Leaves of Grass" (much of it which was set into type by the poet himself) now commands a high price in the auction room, and those who have been fortunate enough to afford a copy, treasure it and love it.I am not alone in the belief that Walt Whitman will some day be accorded the place of America's greatest native poet, whose memory will be revered down the ages.But who now will step forward to buy this home and make the neglected birthplace of his a national shrine? Is the American nation so rich that it has become poor—in appreciation for its great?Doe's Fall From Plane Puzzling

Connellsville, Pa., March 27 (AP).

—Why a doe, weighing about 150 pounds, fell from an airplane as it flew over the mountain tops of Salt-lick township, near Champion, is a question confronting residents of Champion and nearby communities.According to Mrs. Katherine Stout, the animal landed near her home. Game Warden John Smith dressed the carcass, taking the meat to Connellsville State hospital.The plane was noticed by many persons. It was said to have been a large monoplane, and its line of flight was reported to be from Somerset to Pittsburgh.It was high in the air when something was seen hurtling from it.
The rear of a yard near a grocery store. It still contained a $4 check and vouchers for tomatoes. Hallowell had delivered to a cannery, but it did not contain the $50 cash that was in it at the time of the robbery.It was believed the thief went to the store to spend part of the money and tossed the purse into the yard, then covering it with growing rye.
The thief never was apprehended.Those sentenced to death were Joseph Braidak, and Konstantin Pichurin, both declared to have been in the pay of an unnamed "foreign intelligence service."Huge Glass "Eye" Starts for WestCorning, N. Y., March 27—The world's largest "eye"—the 200-inch telescope disc which has been two years in the making here—moved on its giant steel car out of Corning, bound for California Thursday.There was no ceremony attending its departure.Weighing twenty tons, the disc is being shipped to the California Institute of Technology where it will remain three years while its top is ground into the shape of a shallow highly polished saucer.After completion of the grinding, the "eye" will be sent to a new observatory to be built on Mt. Palomar, an isolated mountain in Southern California. With the new disc scientists expect to make many discoveries in parts of the universe as yet unglimped through smaller telescopes.The words "200-inch disc" are painted in black on each side ofThe heavily loaded specially constructed steel railroad car. The shining housing, reaching nearly eighteen feet above the rails, will be visible for miles as it travels through a score of states from coast to coast.With work on another new subway started in New York, talk now centers on the possibility of "moving sidewalks" for Manhattan's Sixth avenue.

sweeping,
Mother tells me this is normal;
Merely pace with life she's keep-

All this talk of pretty dresses,
All this love of style she's showing,

Which so much my mind distresses,
Merely proves that she is growing.

"But," say I, "it comes so early!"
"Oh," says she, "I wish you'd drop

This must be! Don't look so surly!
There's no power on earth can

Though with you the notion lingers,
It takes years to grow a woman.

Merely proves that she is human."

I reply: "But what's the hurry?"
And she answers, almost raging:

If she showed no sign of aging."

Says Woman Who Stole Husband Sent Him Love in Carload Lots

Los Angeles, March 27 (AP)—Love and kisses—and underwear sizes—was the theme of letters introduced Thursday at the trial of Mrs. Lelah V. Palmer's $1,000,000 alienation of affections suit against Mrs. Vera J. Joyce, wealthy Chicago and Beverly Hills society matron.

Mrs. Palmer charged Mrs. Joyce wrote the letters to her husband, Frank S. Palmer, Chicago storage company official, and stole his love.

Mrs. Joyce described in one note the inspiring effect produced on her by a special delivery letter from Palmer.

"Audrey got her ball on the roof of the garage and wanted to climb the trellis to get it down," she wrote. "I thought it looked pretty shaky for her to attempt it. However, after reading your letter a couple of times, I scampered out in the yard, up the trellis like a ringtailed monkey and threw the ball down to her. That's the effect your letters have on me."

Another letter to Palmer said, "I'll just never get caught up with all the kisses I owe you." It ended: "Love to you, dear, in carload lots."

The letter thanked Palmer for "those lovely gifts," including face powder, of which "you got the correct shade and everything."

Another missive said "if you really want to know . . . I wear size 10 hose, 36 undies, 17 pajamas," then listed other clothing sizes.

"Now are there any secrets I've omitted? Just send me your particular brand of kisses and hugs and skip everything else."

Mrs. Palmer testified she and Palmer married last March at Tijuana, Mexico, and remarried at Monroe, Mich., last July. He was devoted to her, she said, and never was out nights until last August.

Her husband met Mrs. Joyce last August when he aided in shipping her furniture from Chicago to her new home in Beverly Hills.

The plaintiff told of visiting Mrs. Joyce last December and asking her

New SPEED QUEEN Safety-Roll WRINGER

In addition to instantly releasing the tension on the rolls, the safety release bar simultaneously disengages the power and frees both rolls.

This shows compact design. Top can be lifted open to clear rolls, etc., without danger of any part getting out of position. Opens and closes as freely as a hinge.

To close wringer and rapidly pressure, all that is necessary is to press down top as shown here. This also can be done with garments part way through wringer. Pressure is self-adjusting.

In addition to the new wringer . . . there is the famous bowl-shaped tub . . . double wall construction to keep water hot longer . . . and the new, beautiful "streamline" Cabinet Model design. You'll save money (and get a better washer besides) by investigating this new Speed Queen.

Men Against the Floods

ELECTRIC SERVICE SAVED BY INTERCONNECTIONS

DURING the days of national flood disaster even the best of electric service failed to stand up at times against wild rivers, sleet, and snow.

There were interruptions of varying seriousness in cities served by companies of the Associated System. But these breaks were the more quickly repaired because the System was able through centralized management to mobilize men and equipment at danger points, and to draw upon distant electric stations for power to supply communities whose own power plants had failed. In some cases these interconnections prevented even the slightest general interruption in service.

Johnstown, Pa. Water engulfed the power plant, marooning employees. But Johnstown was without electric light for only a few hours. The Johnstown system was tied in with other Associated System stations at Deep Creek, Md., and at Piney, Erie, and Altoona, Pa., so that current was restored to the residential section of the city as early as Wednesday night, the flood having been most severe during that day.

Crews of linemen, central station men, service men, meter repair men, were rushed to Johnstown from Erie, Reading, York, Lebanon. Three trucks with trailers and 28 pumps were sent from Long Island to help pump out cellars and prevent the spread of disease. The unit of the Associated System which serves Johnstown is the Pennsylvania Electric Company.

Binghamton, N. Y. Raging waters of the Susquehanna flooded the Westover Plant, main source of power for the Binghamton area, and put it completely out of commission. Just before the waters crept up to the boilers, however, the Binghamton electric system was tied in with Associated plants at Elmira and at Holland, N. J., 110 miles

Savant Describes Treatment Of Tuberculosis by Surgery

Richmond, Va., March 27 (AP)—Surgical treatment of tuberculosis patients "to rest that part of the body which is sick" represents the most outstanding advancement made in the treatment of the disease, Dr. Iago Galdston, executive secretary of the information bureau of the New York Academy of Medicine and consultant in health education of the National Tuberculosis Association, said here Thursday.

Addresses Virginia Body
Dr. Galdston, who was here to address the annual meeting of the Virginia Tuberculosis Association, said the treatment was largely a development of the past ten years and was still "spreading."

"There are several methods of setting the lung at rest, he explained. One is by 'splinting' the lung, 'just as you would splint a broken bone,' but probably the most common method is the pneumo-thorax, by which air is admitted to the space between the chest wall and the lung," Dr. Galdston explained, adding that the fact man has much more lung capacity than ordinarily is needed contributes to the success of the treatment.
